Expert support

MAN Diesel & Turbo's dedicated technical support team has many years' experience of working across our product range and has access to all our original technical design information and engine build records.

Using their technical expertise and OEM resources, the technical support team can provide remote telephone and email support for general technical enquiries and troubleshooting, or on-site support anywhere in the world.

Our on-site technical support service includes assessment, diagnostics, analysis and reporting, and may also provide consultancy on maintenance activities and performance optimisation that can help to reduce your operating costs.

We also offer component failure inspection and reporting, as well as analysis of lubrication oil and water treatment providing a vital indication of how an engine is performing and how this can be improved.
